TRIAL REFUSED GREEN & DILLEN

Judge Love Handed Down His Decision Monday Morning.

GIVES HIS REASONS

They are Quite Lengthy and go Into Details—Green and Dillen Wil Receive their Sentence Next Monday.

THE TEXT OF THE DECISION GIVEN.

Judge Love Monday moruing handed down his decision refusing a new trial to Ira Green and William Dillen, the convicted murderers of Turnkey Jerry Condo They will probably be sentenced next Monday. The judge's ruling in the case is as follows:

Com of Pa. vs. Wm. Dillen and Ira Green } In the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Centre Co. No. 45 Aug. term of 1904.

This is a rule to show cause why a new trial should not be granted to the defendants. Some twenty-three reasons have been filed. We have examined them carefully and do not deem it necessary to consider but three or four of them.

The tenth and eleventh reasons are that the Court erred in not quashing the array of jurors because a certified list of the jurors drawn for the August term of court had not been placed up in the Sheriff's office, and that a certified list was hung up in the prothonotary's office. After hearing the evidence on the motion to quash we over-ruled the motion, and refused to quash the array or panel of jurors. We have not been convinced that it was error and no authority has been shown that would warrant us in changing our ruling made in the trial of the cause. The reason charging the Court with error because one of the counsel for Commonwealth turned and made some improper remarks to the prisoners, is without merit, as the Courts attention being called to it at once, it was immediately corrected and could not work harm to the defendants.

The reasons that the trial was pressed with to much haste, and that it should have been continued, was passed upon at the time the case was called for trial and no sufficient grounds or reason has been shown to convince us that any wrong was done the prisoners in our refusing the application than made for a continuance of the trial.

Another reason that is assigned is that talesmen were selected or called by the coroner. This became necessary as the sheriff assumed the position of public prosecutor which in a case of so serious import, and when there was no real necessity for it, was rather indelicate, and tended to embarrass rather than facilitate the administration of Justice. But he being upon the record as prosecutor and to that extent interested, the Coroner was called in, who had duly qualified as such. And no objections was made to his acting and no exceptions taken, and under the law we think he was competent to act in lieu of the sheriff and as sheriff in this instance, see section 131, act of 1833 & 34 also Com vis Carson, Phila Rep 219.

Testimony was taken to show that two of the Jurors had deceived the defendants upon their examination upon their voirdine. As to Mr Gramley, his examination upon his voirdine is full, and could not have misled the defendants. He is a prominent and educated citizen of the county serving his third or fourth term as County Superintendent of Public Schools and was accepted as a juror by he defendants without objection.

The testimony as to Mr. Gerberich who is a very reputable and intelligent citizen of good repute, raises simply an issue of fact, that it would be perhaps doubtful what the verdict of a jury would be if submitted to them. In our judgment the weight of the testimony would be in his favor. He was fully examined upon his verdict and accepted by the defendants without objection.

In fact, the panel of twelve chosen were all accepted by the defendants without objection, and the jury selected without defendants having exhausted their pre-emptory challenges. We are not persuaded that their reason under all circumstances warrant our granting a new trial. The reason charging error because the court failed to comment more fully upon the evidence as to the good character of Dillon, we do not think under the facts in the case needs much discussion. The evidence in itself was quite meagre, and we affirmed the pointe submitted upon that question, but added thereto in our answer what the Superior court laid down in the case of Com vs. Harmon 199 Pa 521 opinion page 524, as the general rules as to the evidence of good character. It is also assigned as a reason that the court erred in not making an immediate order upon the application of Clement Dale Esq., one of the counsel for defendants for process and means to enable defendants to prepare their defense. The application was for an order to be made upon the commissioners to pay a sum of money. We had no authority to make such an order. There was an application made by Mr. Dale for compulsory process for witnesses. Had there been, it would have been granted at once. When the application was made, we suggested that he ascertain who and what witnesses he wanted to subpœna and we would grant process and also suggest that the commissioners agree to allow a reasonable sum to aid the defendants in procuring witnesses and preparing their defense.

Below will be found a continuance of the reasons given by Judge Love for refusing a new trial to Green and Dillon.

Immediately after their arrest, we saw the commissioners counsel and suggested to him that he have the commissioners communicate with the prisoners and see if they had counsel, or to see if they had any choice of counsel to make, and we would assign such counsel to take charge of their defence. They made no choice and the Court assigned H. C. Quigley, Esq., to look after their defense, two or three weeks before Court convened. Later on Clement Dale Esq., and Hon. A. O. Furst were called into the case by relatives of the prisoners. No compulsory process for witnesses was applied for until after Court convened and a day or so before the cause was called for trial. We are not persuaded that the Court erred in that matter. The facts in the case were confined to a narrow compass, and no great extent in dispute. It was not denied that the prisoners concocted a plan to escape jail for themselves and other prisoners, which involved the commission of a crime. The evening the crime was committed, the prisoners having a couple of days before procured what might well be termed dangerous or deadly instruments, got out of their cell and with the instruments, concealed themselves in the bath room, not far from the main entrance into the prison department of the jail. They knew that no one was present or about the jail but the turnkey Jerry Condo. Dillon removed his shoes from his feet so as to avoid making a noise, when they were to make the assault upon the deceased. They evidently were to overcome all obstacle in the way of their plan of escape. They lay in wait in the bath room for three quarters of an hour before the turnkey entered. Just after he entered and locked the door behind him, they, just as he had started up the stairs leading to the cells above to be locked, they came out of the bath room and Dillon dealt him a heavy blow with a heavy iron T. shape and Green jumped up the stairs above him and began to batter him over the head with a piece of iron about a foot in length, one and a half inches in width and one half inch thick striking him some eight or nine times. The blows resulted in his death, he dying in about twenty eight hours after the beating.

Who were the prisoners waiting for armed as they were with the dangerous instruments? Had they determined to overcome the principal object that would prevent their escape even to the taking life? It is true they testified they did not intend to kill. This testimony went to the jury without the Court even calling the attention of the jury to the fact that in considering the testimony of the defendants they in considering it should regard the interest they had in the result of the trial. The facts as above stated were practically undisputed. That the instruments were of a dangerous and deadly character is clear. That they were deliberately procured by the prisoners and that they lie in wait until an opportune time presented itself to use them upon the deceased. That Dillon stealing upon the turnkey in his stocking feet struck the first blow. That they acted in concert in the consideration of their criminal purpose, is clear. That the beating on the head with a dangerous weapon was designedly done, and the blows were rained upon a vital part of the body, with said instruments with a manifest purpose to use it, that the use of it resulted in death. We left the question of their intent to kill fairly to the jury under the evidence and said that if the act was done deliberately, premeditated-

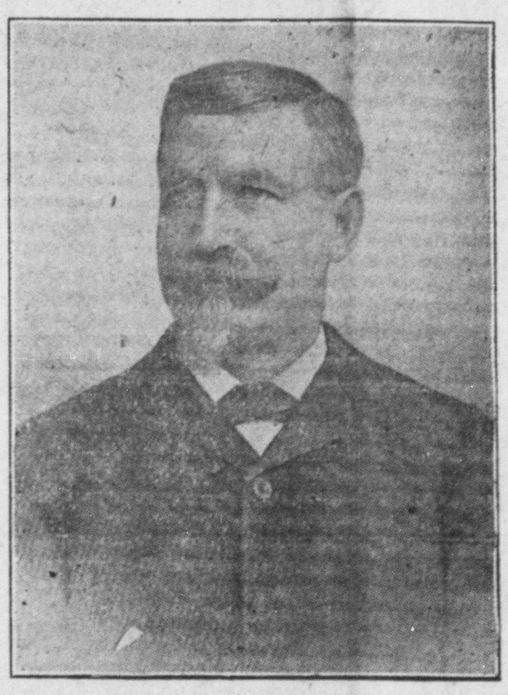
Men Whom Every Good Citizen Can Support November 8th.



HON. JOHN G. LOVE,

An Able Jurist Whom the People of Centre County Should Re-Elect November 8th.

COL. E. A. IRVIN.

Edward A. Irvin was born in 1835 at Curwensville where he received his early education. When sixteen he entered the Academy at Mt. Holly, N. J., where he remained two years. This was followed by one year at Edgehill school at Princeton. In 1857 he returned home and associated himself with his father in the lumber business, becoming sole head of that business three years later. William Irvin, his father, was also engaged in merchandizing. He was one of the strong men of this section of the State, distinguished alike for his business sagacity and his patriotism.

When the war broke out in 1861, the subject of this sketch was at Mariette, Pa., with a large quantity of timber for sale. He came home to Curwensville, handed over the care of his business interests to his father, recruited a company of one hundred men of which he was elected captain. This company became a part of the famous regiment known as the "Bucktails." He was captured and spent two months in Libby Prison; was made Lieutenant Colonel in Sept., 1862; was dangerously wounded in the head at the battle of Fredericksburg. He was closely identified with the "Bucktail Regiment" up to the time of his discharge and shared in all its eventful history. On his return home Col. Irvin resumed the business of merchandizing and lumber which he conducted with marked success until 1878. He then quit merchandizing and has since given his entire time to lumber and real estate business.

SOLOMON R. DRESSER.

Solomon R. Dresser, now an able representative from the 21st Congressional district and Republican candidate for re-election, was born in Litchfield, Hillsdale Co., Mich., Feb. 1st, 1842. He received his education in the common schools of Litchfield and Hillsdale college. He for a time, conducted the Dresser farm with his father until 1865 when the oil fields of West Va. began to attract attention and companies were formed for oil operations. In one of these he took stock and soon became its manager continuing in this capacity until 1872 when he came to Pennsylvania to engage in the production of oil and gas. Here he gained the practical experience, which combined with his inventive genius placed his name foremost among the men of brains whose business energy invented and developed the machinery and appliances used in the oil and gas industry. Among his inventions are a packer for natural gas wells, a rubber coupler to make a tight joint in natural gas pipes and an insulating coupler which prevents the destruction of water and gas pipes by electrolysis. He has employed labor largely and has never had a strike or any trouble with his employes by all of whom he is highly respected. It may be truly said, indeed, that throughout his life he has adhered strictly to the principles of honor that marks the true gentleman and has aimed to live for the good of those around him rather than for self-aggrandizement.

Mr. Dresser has proven himself a valu-

LAWS SWIFT VENGEANCE!

Edward Mills Gets Nine Years in Penitentiary

FOR COWARDLY CRIME

He attacked and Beat Into Insensibility Miss Emma Love a Sister of Judge Love of this Place.

LYNCHING NOT NEEDED IN BLAIR CO.

Edward Mills, the herculean negro who attacked and beat into insensibility with a bludgeon Miss Emma Love, a sister of Judge John G. Love of Bellefonte, on a lonely road near Tyrone seven days ago, found out Monday how swift and sure is Blair county justice.

The negro was brought into the court room at Hollidaysburg by Deputy Sheriff Riddle. He waived the finding of a grand jury and pleaded guilty to aggravated assault and battery and robbery.

The facts of the crime are as follows:

Miss Love was walking along her home near Nealmont when the negro approached her. As she atttmpted to pass by him the negro brandished the bludgeon and struck her on the back of the head. The blow was sufficient to beat her into insensibility. The miscreant thinking he had killed his victim, refraining from wrong-doing further than to rob her of five dollars, and then escaped. When she regained her senses she made her way home.

Mills lived with another colored man in a shanty near Nealmont. When he was accused of the crime he at first protested his innocence, but his fellow lodger in the shanty told the officers that Mills had been out of the shanty that night, and when he returned he told of a woman being robbed. Mills was then arrested and imprisoned in the Tyrone lockup. In the meantime Clark Grazier's bloodhound had been put on his trail, and the intelligent animal tracked him to the lockup. Mills's bravado then forsook him and he confessed that he was the guilty man.

Mills was prosecuted at the June sessions for assault and battery with intent to commit rape, the prosecutrix being Mrs Ellie Reed, of Tyrone Forges. The jury was divided on the question of his guilt He was found not guilty, but directed to pay the costs.

District Attorney W. L. Hicks said: "I am satisfied that this defendant is an exceedingly dangerous man, and in justice to the community he ought to be given the maximum sentence of thirteen years, but of course the court will consider his submission."

Judge Bell said in imposing sentence: "As the district attorney has said, I think a heavy sentence should be imposed upon you. If the bloodhounds had tracked you in the south your fate would have been sealed. I congratulate the district attorney and Officers Wands and Barr for their efficiency in this case. I want the people of Pennsylvania to understand that there is no necessity for lynching in this state. You are sentenced to pay $100 fine, costs of prosecution and serve nine years in the penitentiary.

BOLD BURGLARS.

Central Pennsylvania Telephone Office Robbed Also Wagner's Mill,

Sometime Sunday night a burglar broke open the door leading into the office of Manager Leas of the Central Pennsylvania Telephone Company on the second floor of Bush Arcade Hall. He pried open the door leading into the manager's office broke open a drawer in a desk and took forty-two dollars in money. There were marks on the pay station door and also on the safe which indicated that the burglar had made an unsuccessful attempt to break them open.

The burglar must have been an expert at the business for the young lady night operator who was asleep in the next room never heard a sound.

WAGNER'S MILL ENTERED.

Sometime Saturday night burglars broke into C. Y. Wagner's mill at Roopsburg. They broke open the money drawer but got no money. The safe was not locked and they secured five dollars there. There is no clue to he perpetrators of these two robberies.

The Dedicatory Services at Martha.

Sunday, Oct. 23rd, 1904, was a most notable day in the history of the Bald Eagle Baptist church and the people of Martha. It was the occasion of the re-opening and dedication of the Baptist church. The last service in the old building was held on June 5th, the tearing down and removing of the lower story preparatory to remodelling began on June 7. On July 17 the corner stone was laid with appropriate ceremony, the remodelled building is practically a new church, it is beautifully finished inside and out and is heated by means of a furnace. The interior consists of the main auditorium, and two class rooms so arranged that they can all be thrown together in plain view of the pulpit. The inside frescoing is a pretty design and suggestive of devotion. There remain sufficient marks of the old building as to suggest the past and its sacred memories so dear to the older members of the church.

The services were largely attended and the commodious building well filled with a happy worshiping throng, the services began with a Sunday school meeting conducted by Supt Earnest Ardery, after the opening service there were excellent addresses on the lesson and Sunday school work by Rev. A. D. Wirtz. Messrs. Earnest Ardery, McKelvey, S. S. Miles and others. The scripture was read by Rev. Talhelm, of Julian, and prayer offered by Rev. Wirtz, after which Pastor Lathrop briefly reviewed the history of the church from the time of its organization on Nov. 28, 1835 to the present time. An appropriate and spiritual sermon was then preached by former pastor, Rev. G. W. Downing, of Pitcairn. The financial situation showed an expenditure of $1,100 dollars all of which had been provided for except about $225. After $115 of this had been secured the congregation adjourned with the benediction by Rev. Downing.

The afternoon services began at 2 o'clock with a praise and prayer service in which a large number participated and was led by Mr. W. R. Heaton. It was inspiring and uplifting. At the platform meeting, following, addresses were made by Rev's. Talhelm, of United Brethren church, Bergen, of the Presbyterian and A. D. Wirtz. Rev. Frank Howes, of Tyrone, was then introduced and in a few moments the balance needed to cover all obligations was pledged. The church was then formerly dedicated to the service and worship of Almighty God. Mr. George Stevens for the Board of Trustees, who constituted the building committee, in a brief address presented the keys to the church. In accepting the same pastor Lathrop expressed the appreciation and joy of the community upon the completion of the work. Rev. Downing made the dedicatory address, after which the congregation joined with the pastor in the dedicatory prayer. The Gloria Patri was sung and congregation dismissed by Rev. Wirtz.

The evening service opened with a praise and prayer meeting after which Rev. Frank Howes, of Tyrone, preached an able and instructive sermon. The service that followed was participated in by quite a number of persons. Several active citizens, who were not members of the church, spoke of their interest in the work which they felt was an honor and credit to the community they had liberally helped the rebuilding and yet they had not given all they wanted to, so they proposed to show their appreciation of the pastor and regard for him by making up a purse for him which should be in addition to the salary he receives. This was speedily done and over $25 was handed the pastor who, surprised and embarrassed by the situation, expressed as best he could his gratitude and thanks. This christian service was one of heartfelt joy and thanksgiving. Rev. G. W. Downing conducted the closing service.

The singing of the large choir under the leadership of Miss Lola Williams is especially worthy of mention. The service of song and praise was appropriate and expressive of the heart melody of the people. It was inspiring and enthusiastic. The anthems were excellent, a duet by two small girls was greatly appreciated and the messages of song given by the male quartette moved all the people.

Thus closed a day that will long be remembered by the community, nearly the entire population have shared in the work of repairing. They have done so willingly, even joyfully. The trustees deserve especial congratulations for the lasting work they have wrought, and the community are to be commended for their loyal support of the work.

go out of Washington, and, wanting to be a soldier, I followed Curly Jim. I didn't think he'd die; he looked so strong— What's the matter, sir? Have I said anything I shouldn't?"

I had him by the arm. I fear that I was shaking him.

"The lady!" I repeated. "She who was married—who gave you money. Wasn't it Mrs. Jeffrey?"

"Yes, I believe that was the name of the man she married. I didn't know him, but I saw her"—

"Where? And why did she give you money? I will take you home with me if you tell me the truth about it."

The boy who ran away from the florist's

He glanced back at the tent from which I had slightly drawn him and a hungry look crept into his eyes.

"Well, it's no secret now," he muttered. "He used to say I must keep my mouth shut, but he wouldn't say so now if he knew I could get home by telling. He used to be sorry for me, he used. What do you want to know?"

"Why Mrs. Jeffrey gave you money to leave Washington."

The boy trembled, drew a step away and then came back, and under those hot Florida skies in the turmoil of departing troops I heard these words:

"Because I heard what she said to Jim."

I felt my heart go down, then up, up, beyond anything I had ever experienced in my whole life. The way before me was not closed then. A witness yet remained, though Jim was dead. The boy was oblivious of my emotion. He was staring with great mournfulness at the tent.

"And what was that?" said I.

His attention, which had been wandering, came back, and it was with some surprise he said:

"It was not much. She told him to take the gentleman into the library. But it was the library where men died, and he just went and died there, too, you remember, and Jim said he wasn't ever going to speak of it, and so I promised not to neither, but—but—when do you think you will be starting, sir?"

I did not answer him. I was feeling very queer, as men feel, I suppose, who in some crisis or event recognize an unexpected interposition of Providence.

"Are you the boy who ran away from the florist's in Washington?" I inquired when ready to speak. "The boy who delivered Miss Moore's bridal bouquet?"

"Yes, sir."

I let go of his hand and sat down. Surely there was a power greater than chance governing this matter. Through what devious ways and from what unexpected sources had I come upon this knowledge?

"Mrs. Jeffrey, or Miss Moore, as she was then, told Jim to seat the gentleman in the library," I now said. "Why?"

"I do not know. He told her the gentleman's name, and then she whispered him that. I heard her, and that was why I got money too. But it's all gone now. Oh, sir, when are you going back?"

I started to my feet. Was it in answer to this appeal or because I realized that I had come at last upon a clew calling for immediate action?

"I am going now," said I, "and you are going with me. Run, for the train we take leaves inside of ten minutes. My business here is over."

CHAPTER XX.

THE peremptory demand for an interview which had been delivered to Miss Moore during the half hour preceding her marriage had come not from the bridegroom, as I had supposed, but from the so called stranger, Mr. Pfeiffer.

For all this proof that Mr. Pfeiffer was well known to her, if not to the rest of the bridal party, no acknowledgment of this was made by any of them then or afterward, nor any contradiction given either by husband or wife to the accepted theory that this seeming stranger from the west had gone into this fatal room of the Moores to gratify his own morbid curiosity.

On the contrary, an extraordinary effort was immediately made by Mr. Jeffrey to rid himself of the only witnesses who could tell the truth concerning those fatal ten minutes, but this brought no peace to the miserable wife, who never again saw a really happy moment.

Extraordinary efforts at concealment argue extraordinary causes for fear. Fully to understand the circumstances of Mrs. Jeffrey's death, it would be necessary first to know what had happened in the Moore house when Mr. Jeffrey learned from Curly Jim that the man, whose hold upon his bride had been such that he dared to demand an interview with her just as she was on the point of descending to her nuptials, had been seated, or was about to be seated, in the room where death had once held its court and might easily be persuaded to hold court again.

The encouragement afforded me by my late discoveries was such that I felt confident that nothing could hinder my success save the necessity of completely pulling down the house. Besides, all investigation had hitherto started, if it had not ended, in the library. I was resolved to begin work in quite a different spot. I had not forgotten the sensations I had experienced in the southwest chamber.

During my absence this house had been released from surveillance. But the major still held the keys, and I had no difficulty in obtaining them. The next thing was to escape its owner's vigilance. This I managed to do through the assistance of Jinny, and when midnight came and all lights went out in the opposite cottage I entered boldly upon the scene. As before, I went first of all to the library.

I wished to make certain that I had exhausted every suspected as well as every known clew to the information I sought. In my long journey home and the hours of thought it had forced upon me I had more than once been visited by flitting visions of things seen in this old house and afterward nearly forgotten. Among these was the book which on that first night of hurried search had given proofs of being in some one's hand within a very short period. The attention I had given it at a moment of such haste was necessarily cursory, and when later a second opportunity was granted me of looking into it again I had allowed a very slight obstacle to deter me. This was a mistake I was anxious to rectify. Anything which had been touched with purpose at or near the time of so mysterious a tragedy—and the position of this book on a shelf so high that a chair was needed to reach it proved that it had been sought and touched with purpose—held out the promise of a clew which one on so blind a trail as myself could not afford to ignore.

But when I had taken the book down and read again its totally uninteresting and unsuggestive title and by another reference to its dim and faded leaves found that my memory had not played me false and that it contained nothing but stupid and wholly irrelevant statistics, my confidence in it as a possible aid in the work I had in hand departed just as it had on the previous occasion. I was about to put it back on the shelf, when I bethought me of running my hand in behind the two books between which it had stood. Ah, that was it! Another book lay flat against the wall at the back of the shelf; by the removal of those in front I was enabled to draw this book out. I soon saw why it had been relegated to such a remote place of concealment on the shelves of the Moore library.

It was a collection of obscure memoirs written by an Englishwoman, but an Englishwoman who had been in America during the early part of the century and who had been brought more or less into contact with the mysteries connected with the Moore house in Washington. Several passages were marked, one particularly, by a heavy pencil line running the length of the margin. As the name of Moore was freely scattered through these passages as well as through two or three faded newspaper clippings which I discovered pasted on the inside cover, I lost no time in setting about their perusal.

The following extracts are from the book itself, taken in the order in which I found them marked:

"It was about this time that I spent a week in the Moore house, that grand and historic structure concerning which and its occupants so many curious rumors are afloat. I knew nothing then of its discreditable fame, but from the first moment of my entrance into its ample and well lighted halls I experienced a sensation which I will not call dread, but which certainly was far from being the impulse of pure delight which the graciousness of my hostess and the imposing character of the place itself were calculated to produce. This emotion was but transitory, vanishing, as was natural in the excitement of my welcome and the extraordinary interest I took in Callista Moore, who in those days was a most fascinating little body. Small to the point of appearing diminutive and lacking all assertion in manner and bearing, she was nevertheless such a lady that she easily dominated all who approached her and produced, quite against her will, I am sure, an impression of aloofness, seasoned with kindness, which made her a most surprising and entertaining study to the analytic observer. Her position as nominal mistress of an establishment already accounted one of the finest in Washington—the real owner, Reuben Moore, preferring to live abroad with his French wife—gave to her least action an importance which her shy if not appealing looks, and a certain strained expression most difficult to characterize, vainly attempted to contradict. I could not understand her and soon gave up the attempt, but my admiration held firm, and by the time the evening was half over I was her obedient slave. I think from what I know of her now that she would have preferred to be mine.

"I was put to sleep in a great chamber which I afterward heard called 'The Colonel's Own.' It was very grand and had a great bed in it almost royal in its size and splendor. I believe that I shrank quite unaccountably from this imposing piece of furniture when I first looked at it, it seemed so big and so out of proportion to my slim little body. But, admonished by the look which I surprised on Mistress Callista's high bred face, I quickly recalled an expression so unsuited to my position as guest and, with a gush of well simulated rapture, began to expatiate upon the interesting characteristics of the room and express myself as delighted at the prospect of sleeping there.

"Instantly the nervous look left her, and, with the quiet remark, 'It was my father's room,' she set down the candles with which both her hands were burdened and gave me a kiss so warm and surcharged with feeling that it sufficed to keep me happy and comfortable for a half hour or more after she passed out.

"I had thought myself a very sleepy girl, but when, after a somewhat lengthened brooding over the dying embers in the open fireplace, I lay down behind the curtains of the huge bed, I found myself as far from sleep as I had ever been in my whole life.

"And I did not recover from this condition for the entire night. For hours I tossed from one side of the bed to the other in my efforts to avoid the persistent eyes of a scarcely to be perceived drawing facing me from the opposite wall. It had no merit as a picture, this drawing, but seen as it was under the rays of a gibbous moon looking in through the half open shutter it exercised upon me a spell such as I cannot describe and hope never again to experience. Finally I rose and pulled the curtains violently together across the foot of the bed. This shut out the picture, but I found it worse to imagine it there with its haunting eyes peering at me through the intervening folds of heavy damask than to confront it openly; so I pushed the curtains back again, only to rise a half hour later and twitch them desperately together once more.

"I fidgeted and worried so that night that I must have looked quite pale when my attentive hostess met me at the head of the stairs the next morning, for her hand shook quite perceptibly as she grasped mine, and her voice was pitched in no natural key as she inquired how I had slept. I replied as truth if not courtesy demanded, 'Not as well as usual,' whereupon her eyes fell, and she remarked quite hurriedly, 'I am so sorry; you shall have another room tonight,' adding in what appeared to be an unconscious whisper, 'There is no use; all feel it; even the young and the gay;' then aloud and with irrepressible anxiety, 'You didn't see anything, dear?'

"'No!' I protested in suddenly awakened dismay. 'Only the strange eyes of that queer drawing peering at me through the curtains of my bed. Is it—is it a haunted room?'

"Her look was a shocked one, her protest quite vehement. 'Oh, no! No one has ever witnessed anything like a ghost there, but every one finds it impossible to sleep in that bed or even in the room. I do not know why unless it is that my father spent so many years of incessant wakefulness inside its walls.'

"'And did he die in that bed?' I asked.

"She gave a startled shiver and drew me hurriedly downstairs. As we paused at the foot she pressed my hand and whispered:

"'Yes; at night, with the full of the moon upon him.'

"I answered her look with one she probably understood as little as I did hers. I had heard of this father of hers. He had been a terrible old man and had left a terrible memory behind him.

"The next day my room was changed according to her promise, but in the light of the charges I have since heard uttered against that house and the family who inhabit it I am glad that I spent one night in what, if it was not a haunted chamber, had certainly a very thrilling effect upon its occupants."

Second passage, the italics showing where it was most heavily marked:

"The house contained another room as interesting as the one I have already mentioned. It went by the name of the library, and its walls were heavily lined with books; but the family never sat there, nor was I ever fortunate enough to see it with its doors unclosed except on the occasion of the grand reception Miss Callista gave in my honor. I have a fancy for big rooms and more than once urged my hostess to tell me why this one stood neglected. But the lady was not communicative on this topic, and it was from another member of the household I learned that its precincts had been forever clouded by the unexpected death within them of one of her father's friends, a noted army officer.

"Why this should have occasioned a permanent disuse of the spot I could not understand, and as every one who conversed on this topic invariably gave the impression of saying less than the subject demanded, my curiosity soon became too much for me, and I attacked Miss Callista once again in regard to it. She gave me a quick smile, for she was always amiable, but shook her head and introduced another topic. But one night when the wind was howling in the chimneys and the sense of loneliness was even greater than usual in the great house, we drew together on the rug in front of my bedroom fire, and as the embers burned down to ashes before us Miss Callista became more communicative.

"Her heart was heavy, she told me; had been heavy for years. Perhaps some ray of comfort would reach her if she took a friend into her confidence. God knew that she needed one, especially on nights like this, when the wind woke echoes all over the house and it was hard to tell which most to fear, the sounds which came from no one knew where, or the silence which settled after.

"She trembled as she said this and instinctively drew nearer to my side so that our heads almost touched over the flickering flame from whose heat and light we sought courage. She seemed to feel grateful for this contact, and the next minute, flinging all her scruples to the wind, she began a relation of events which more or less answered my late unwelcome queries.

"The death in the library, about which her most perplexing memory hung, took place when she was a child and her father held that high governmental position which has reflected so much credit upon the family. Her father and the man who thus perished had been intimate friends. They had fought together in the war of 1812 and received the same distinguished marks of presidential approval afterward. They were both members of an important commission which brought them into diplomatic relations with England. It was while serving on this commission that the sudden break occurred which ended all intimate relations between them and created a change in her father that was equally remarked at home and abroad. What occasioned this break no one knew. Whether his great ambition had received some check through the jealousy of this so called friend—a supposition which did not seem possible, as he rose rapidly after this—or on account of other causes darkly hinted at by his contemporaries, but never breaking into open gossip, he was never the same man afterward. His children, who used to rush with effusion to greet him, now shrank into corners at his step or slid behind half open doors, whence they peered with fearful interest at his tall figure, pacing in moody silence the halls of his ancestral home or sitting with frowning brows over the embers dying away on the great hearthstone of his famous library.

"Their mother, who was an invalid, did not share these terrors. The father was ever tender of her, and the only smile they ever saw on his face came with his entrance into her darkened room.

"Such were Callista Moore's first memories. Those which followed were more definite and much more startling. President Jackson, who had a high opinion of her father's ability, advanced him rapidly. Finally a position was given him which raised him into national prominence. As this had been the goal of his ambition for years, he was much gratified by this appointment, and, though his smiles came no more frequently, his frowns lightened and from being positively threatening became simply morose.

"Why this moroseness should have sharpened into menace after an unexpected visit from his once dear but long estranged companion in arms, his daughter, even after long years of constant brooding upon this subject, dares not decide. If she could she might be happier.

"The general was a kindly man, sharp of face and of a tall, thin figure, but with an eye to draw children and make them happy with a look. But his effect on the father was different. From the moment the two met in the great hall below the temper of the host betrayed how little he welcomed this guest. He did not fail in courtesy—the Moores are always gentlemen—but it was a hard courtesy, which cut while it flattered. The two children, shrinking from its edge without knowing what it was that hurt them, slunk to covert and from behind the two pillars which marked the entrance to the library watched the two men as they walked up and down the halls discussing the merits of this and that detail of the freshly furnished mansion. These two innocent but eager spies, whom fear rather than curiosity held in hiding, even caught some of the sentences which passed between the so called friends, and, though these necessarily conveyed but little meaning to their childish minds, the words form-

HAUL UP THE FLAG

Patriotic Inspiration For First Voters In the Roosevelt Campaign.

FIGHT FOR NATIONAL PROSPERITY

Chairman Penrose and Secretary Andrews Working Hard For a Big Vote In This State.

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Oct. 25.

A patriotic call has gone forth to the citizens of the great American republic to be on their guard against the Democracy as they were in the last two presidential campaigns when the national honor was at stake.

While the Parker managers insist that the money question is no longer an issue, Bryan is on the stump declaring that the election of Parker will ultimately bring about the "great reforms" for which he fought in 1896 and 1900.

The entire plan of campaign of the present Democratic national machine is in line with the assaults upon the honor and the flag of the country which were made under the Chicago and the Kansas City platforms.

The patriotic young Americans must be roused to action now as they were then.

It has been suggested that there could be no better way to inject the proper spirit into the "First Voters" of the country than that which was adopted when the credit of the nation was in peril. Then many hundreds of thousands of citizens, Democrats of the old school, as well as Republicans, run up the American flag and kept it flying until the people demonstrated that Bryan and his anarchistic doctrines had no place in the hearts of a great majority of the voters.

Parker's recent sensational utterances, which were calculated to incite the Filipinos to attack the American troops now stationed in the Philippines, and Cleveland's free trade deliverances, are quite in line with the Bryanistic campaigning of four and eight years ago. It is declared that there is just as much need now to run up the American flag for the honor and glory of the nation and to show that the voters are not in sympathy with such teachings, as there was in the last two nationtl campaigns.

The flag is the emblem, not of a party, but of the people as a whole. Let those who believe that the honor and greatness of the flag will be best promoted by continuing the policy of protection and sound currency display their country's banner, and with it the names of Roosevelt and Fairbanks, the champions who stand for the policy which has made and will keep this country strong and prosperous.

Hang out the flag, and show that you stand for the flag, for protection and prosperity!

ACTIVITY AT HEADQUARTERS.

These are busy days at the Republican state committee headquarters in this city. Senator Boies Penrose, the chairman of the committee, and Colonel Wesley R. Andrews, the secretary, rarely leave the headquarters on Locust street until midnight, and frequently the secretary is obliged to remain until 2 o'clock in the morning getting off the mail.

While the election of the Republican electors in Pennsylvania is a foregone conclusion, the Republican campaign has been run upon the policy that there must be nothing taken for granted, and that the size of the Republican majority in this state will have much influence upon public sentiment throughout the country after election.

It is pointed out that with the Democrats reviving their campaign for a reduction of the tariff, a falling off in the Republican vote in Pennsylvania, the home of the American policy of protection, would properly be taken as indicating an indifference to the result of tariff tinkering at the coming session of congress.

With a reduction of the Republican majority in this state, the Democrats would surely declare that the agitation for free trade meets with favor in Pennsylvania, and therefore it is necessary to roll up a crushing majority in order to emphasize Pennsylvania's protest against any interference with the protective tariff system through the provisions of which the state has grown to be one of the most prosperous in the Union.

It is the duty of Republicans who are active in the party organization to warn the voters of their respective precincts of the plans of the Democracy and to see to it that a full Republican vote shall be polled.

The chief danger at this time lies in the attack of the Democrats in the congressional, senatorial and representative districts.

Every effort should be made to preserve the present Republican majority in the national house of representatives and in the legislature at Harrisburg. The loss of a single congressman in Pennsylvania might endanger the election of a Republican speaker of the house at Washington, an event which would create serious disturbances to the business interests of the country, and might imperil national prosperity.

"HOW CRANDALL SHOT A BEAR."

O yes Jerry shot a bear;
Of course, no one knows where,
For the stories he has told,
Are like his stories of old;
With the gun upon his shoulder
Jerry came around the boulder.
And as he was a chew'in
he came upon old Bruin.
And to his great surprise,
He found old bruin alive;
And says, "see here my son."
Do you know I've a gun,
And when old bruin looked around
Jerry was not to be found;
But near by you could see.
Our friend "Jerry" up a tree.
The report of Jerry's gun
Soon told what he had done.
And for proof of this poem,
You can go to Jerry's home,
And on the tree hangs a bear,
That Jerry shot no one knows [where.

A SERMON TO FIREMEN.

Logans and Undines Attend M. E. Services Sunday.

The services in the Methodist church Sunday morning especially for firemen were of unusual interest. The Logan Fire Company attended in full uniform wearing their new hats and made a very nobby appearance. R. A. Beck acted as chief in the absence of John Bower who is on the sick list. There were forty of the Logans present. The Undines also turned out in large number but not in uniform.

Rev. J. A. Wood Jr. preached an eloquent and forceful sermon.

The introduction to the sermon was a history of the modern fire apparatus, dating back to the second century before Christ, in which it was shown that a regular force pump was used for extinguishing fires in Alexandria, Egypt, long before the christian era, and that the Romans used "Siphones" for the protection of their towns and cities.

Reference was made to the terrible fires in Rome during Nero's reign and later, of the lofty wooden tenement houses 8, 10, and 12 stories high, narrow streets and the terrible loss of life in those fires. From which however, grew a fire system which has steadily developed until it has grown into the marvellously perfected form of today.

At an early date Rome was placed under the control of the triumovri, three chosen citizens whose duty it was to keep up a police and fire patrol and who employed vigiles or watchmen. Such a fire patrol was in existence in the Augustian age, about the time of the birth of Christ. The fire bucket and the small axe were a portion of this equipment.

Among the results of these great conflagrations were the laying of watermains and the diminishing of the height of the houses, as the large siphones or fire engines could throw a stream only at an elevation of about sixty feet, a law was passed restricting the height of ouildings to 60 feet.

Chemical extinguishers were also used, rags dipped in vinegar about the 16th century, fire hooks and fire ladders were well known.

In 1657 there is a description of John Hautechs fire engine made at Nuremberg, which could throw a stream one inch in diameter to a height of 80 feet. It stood on a truck 10 feet long and four broad. Its tank was 8ft long, 4ft high and 2ft wide. It took 28 men to work it.

Hautech also used a flexible hose with a nozzle. The Vander Heydens arranged a suction tube by which a supply of water could be taken directly from a cistern.

The long leather hose was invented by the two Dutchmen, Jas. and Nicholas Vender Heyden about the year 1672, and for a long time was called wasser schlange or "water snake." The air cylinder to regulate the flow of the stream belongs to this period.

Seamless humpen hose was woven by Beck a lace worker at Leipsic in 1720.

After this introduction the preacher presented the characteristics and qualities needed to make a good fireman. From material fire he turned the thought of his audience to the spiritual and eternal fires which are a menace to the soul and the well being of men, that vice and evil habit is a fire that eats out the life and ruins for time and eternity.

To fight these evils within us and about us, we need to exercise constant vigilence, possess indominable courage, hardy endurance and a true self devotion and these based upon faith in Jesus Christ as our personal Saviour and helper.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

The Susquehanna Gas Company Will Continue Their Drilling in the Hyner Territory.

Hyner, Oct. 24.—The Susquehanna Gas company has closed a contract with O. O. Baker, a practical driller from Penfield, Pa., whereby three new wells will be sunk in this territory at once. Some of the machinery is now on the ground and the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible before cold weather begins in earnest. Contractor Baker will use the Keystone drilling outfit, which is manufactured at Beaver Falls, Pa., and by this new and improved process wells are drilled more rapidly than formally. These three new wells will be located at the head of Cleveland hollow, on Pine Creek fork of Hyner run, three miles north of present wells. This is practically a new territory, as it lies across or on the opposite side of the mountains from the former operations on what is known as the anti-clinal or higher point of the gas sand.

Gas pipes have been laid across the river for the purpose of supplying our people with light and fuel but no connections have been made with the wells and it is not known how soon this will take place, but it is hoped it will not be long.

J. N. Farwell, who resides on the south side and whose home is near one of the wells, has the gas piped into his house and now enjoys its convenience and practical worth for both heating and lighting. He is envied by all who have inspected his comfortable abode.

Academy Won.

The Bellefonte Academy foot ball eleven covered themselves with glory on Saturday afternoon by defeating the Y. M. C. A. team of Philipsburg by the score of 5 to 0.

The Philipsburg stars of many years experience lined up against the Academy boys, but the team work of the Bellefonters in spite of the heavy weight of their opponents won the game for the Academy. Every Academy boy played winning ball but the strong line bucking of Gutelius, Miller and Roelofs and the good end running of Weaver and Taylor deserve special mention. The first half ended 0-0, but in the second half Weaver and Roelofs by long end runs carried the ball near the Philipsburg goal, Roelofs' scoring the touch down through clever interference on the part of the entire team.

Next Saturday the crack athletic club of Bellwood plays the Academy at the fair grounds at 2 o'clock sharp.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy, The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. GET READY FOR ELECTION DAY.

The main thing now is to make sure to get to the polls on election day. We don't need much more discussion or campaigning. The people have their minds pretty well made up on what they intend to do on Election Day.

Be sure that you do it, that's all. Don't imagine that your vote is not needed.

The issues of the campaign have been thoroughly gone over. As far as Republicans, Independents and Gold Democrats are concerned, they did not need much discussion, for the issues as they see them are the same that were presented to the voters in 1898, 1900 and 1902. The only interest aroused among these voters was whether the Democratic party had any new issues to present. It did not have and was not even united in its opposition to the issues presented by the Republican party.

So the question comes back to this: Shall we vote as we have voted in the recent past and keep the party in power which has a definite plan of government and legislation, that has been tried and received the approval of the people, or shall we seek a change, split up Congress and install in power an unknown quantity?

There is little doubt as to how that question will be answered, if the voters go to the polls. The only fear is that through over-confidence the men who have sustained the hands of McKinley and Roosevelt may not turn out on Election Day and the opposition thereby be permitted to take the prize by default.

Turn out and vote for the Republican candidate for Congress and for Republican electors on the presidential ticket. More than that, not only take yourself to the polls, but get your neighbor to go with you. The result means undisturbed business conditions and continued peace and prosperity as well as safe, stable and wise government.

Those Democrats who were fond of comparing Fairbanks to an iceberg must have bumped into him head on.

AN ALLEGORY.

Once upon a time there was a beautiful city called Columbia, which was known as the city of refuge for the oppressed of all the earth. Many flocked to its gates and none were turned away. Its founders and the worthy burgomasters who succeeded them surrounded the city with a wall which they named "Protection." Behind the security of this defense the citizens of Columbia grew and prospered. They built shops and factories, churches and schools. The children who filled the streets were trained in virtue, were educated at the expense of the city, and were inured to habits of industry. The city was a city of homes and of opportunity. Its prosperity become the wonder and envy of its neighbors, and the citizens of Columbia were urged to tear down their wall. They were told that it hampered the growth and development of the city. The citizens, however, hesitated to accept the advice of their rivals, and as their enemies increased their capacity to attack Prosperity Wall, the people appointed one of their own citizens, a great architect and builder named McKinley, to strengthen the wall, increase the defences at the gates and in every part thereof make it proof against the shots of her rivals which were directed with unerring aim against the smoking chimneys of industry.

The great architect and builder, however, had many enemies, who declared that the improved defences were not scientifically constructed and that the wall threw its shadow upon the homes that rested in peace behind it, and in an evil moment another architect was appointed to modify and change the defences of Prosperity Wall. This new architect sub-let the contract to a firm by the name of Wilson-Gorman & Co., who weakened the defences, lowered the wall, and even urged its entire demolition, saying every stone should be raised to the ground.

The result was disastrous. The shots of the enemy hurt the industries of Columbia. Her citizens suffered from lack of employment. The rich became poor and the poor lost their homes and the sound of mourning was heard in the grass-grown streets.

The eyes of the people were opened. They longed for the good times that were gone. They discharged the architects whose work had caused so much suffering and employed another named Dingley, who restored the wall, strengthened the defences and drove the enemy away. The fires were again lighted, plumes of smoke again waived over the city, the whir of wheels and the hum of trains made music in the streets, and the people smiled again, while seven years of plenty filled the storehouses with the good things of life.

But some of the citizens forgot their past suffering. They envied the good fortune of their neighbors and urged that the wall be again destroyed. They said its name was not "Prosperity" but "Robbery" and the old firm of architects whose work had wrought such disaster is again trying to tear down the wall and open the gates and fill the moat, while the enemies are eagerly awaiting the result. The fair city of Columbia, however, has learned her lesson in the hard school of experience.

Democrats always boast of what they are going to do; never of what they have done.

Western Democrats who vote for Judge Parker should understand that his election would be considered a complete vindication of the Cleveland administration with its free soup attachment.

The campaign textbook of the Democratic party ought to sell well after the campaign being placed in the same class with Peck's Bad Boy and Bill Nye's works. Among other discoveries it has made as evidence that we should abandon the Philippines is that European women in that country "rarely bear more than one child"—perhaps the compositor omitted "at a time" and the proof reader let it stand.

KEPLER VOTED FOR MORE.

One of the local Democratic newspapers must be hard up for campaign ammunition when it devotes column after column, week after week to one itemized statement of the amount of dollars and cents which has been paid to Judge Love since he has been on the bench. For absolute rot and buncombe these efforts have never been excelled. In fact, it shows supreme ignorance, or rather a presumption of ignorance, on the part of its readers. More than this, it is an insult to the intelligence of its patrons.

Anyone who knows anything at all is well aware of the fact that udge Love has not received a single penny more for his services than the law allows him. He hasn't robbed the state treasury, nor has he been paid more than any other judge in his place would have received for the same service. It the law allowed too much that is an entirely different question. And if the judicial salary was too high, Legislator Kepler, who is on the Democratic ticket for re-election, should be kept at home, for during the last session he stood up boldly and voted for an increase of a thousand dollars in the salary of each judge all over the state.

Judge Love didn't vote to increase his own salary a thousand dollars more than it was, but Kepler did, so if the salary was too high during the past ten years Kepler should be taken to task for making it still higher. The Centre Democrat's bluster, therefore, recoils upon itself and Kepler should be left at home, since during the coming session he might vote to raise the judicial and other salaries still higher.

There is, however, no danger of him voting to increase the salaries of the poorly paid school teacher, since during last session he voted against making the minimum salary of the poor teacher $35 per month and the very next day voted to increase the salaries of the judges from $4,000 to $5,000 per year. Are those the kind of legislators the friends of public schools in Centre county want to send to Harrisburg? Hardly if they know it.

In one column the Centre Democrat bewails the fact that Judge Love has been receiving so much salary and in the next column it advocates the election of Kepler, a legislator who voted to make it still more. This is consistency with a vengeance, isn't it?

Another feature of the case is this: The Democrat has not told its readers whether, in case he had been on the bench during the past ten years, Ellis L. Orvis would not have taken exactly to the cent just as much money during that time as has been paid to Judge Love. Nor does it say that should Orvis be elected—which is not at all likely—he would draw the same amount during the coming ten years and ten thousand dollars more. That part the Centre Democrat forgets to tell its readers which would be the truth and nothing but the truth. Or does that paper pretend to make its readers believe that Orvis would not draw his salary, but make a present of it to the State? Well, hardly. He was never known to be that kind of an individual.

Oh! Consistency! What a precious jewel thou art, but never found in the columns of such publication as the Centre Democrat, of this place.

That was a happy comparison of Senator Beveridge when he said that the Democratic party was like the engineer trying to run his machine forward and backward at the same time.

A Campaign Falsehood Nailed.

I am reliably informed that my opponent W. Groh Runkle, Democratic candidate for District Attorney, is circulating the report, throughout the county, that I do not want the office. I want to say to my friends, in reply, that Mr. Runkle has no authority from me to make any statements whatever concerning my candidacy. I do want the office and will use all honorable means to secure my election. However, I do not want it bad enough to secure my election by circulating falsehoods, about myself or my opponent.

The above charge can be verified by affidavit.

able member of the 58 Congress to which he was elected in 1902 as representative from the 21st district of Pa. receiving 16,722 votes to 13,243 cast for DeHibner the Democratic candidate. He served on the Patent and Coinage Weights and

SOLOMON R. DRESSER.

Measures Committees during the last session.

Mr. Dresser has for many years been a resident of Pennsylvania where he is widely known. Self-reliant, discreet clever headed, with unerring judgment and a wide practical knowledge of public interests, he has gained the respect of all with whom he has come in contact. He will be elected by a large majority.

JOHN P. ELKIN.

The Republicans of Centre county will take great pleasure in rolling up a large majority for Hon. John P. Elkin, our candidate for Justice of the Supreme court.

He was born in West Mahoning township, Indiana county, this State, January 11th, 1854. His father, Francis Elkin, with others, founded at Wellsville, Ohio, the American Tin Plate Company, which erected the first tin plate mill in this country. In this mill John P. Elkin worked during several of his boyhood years. He was educated in the common schools of Smicksburg, Indiana county, and at the Indiana Normal school. At the age of 15 he began teaching school, an occupation he followed for several years. In 1882 he entered the law department of the University of Michigan and graduated two years later.

In the same year he was admitted to the bar of Indiana county and was also elected a member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. Two years later he was re-elected. He was a delegate to a number of Pennsylvania Republican State conventions and permanent chairman of that of 1891. For several years he was chairman of the Republican State committee. For nearly three years he was deputy attorney general for Governor Stone, which position he held during the latter's entire administration. He was a most prominent candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor two years ago.

GEORGE E. LAMB.

George E. Lamb, the Republican nominee for Prothonotary, was born in 1861 at Herndon, Northumberland county, this State, of honorable christian parentage, where he received his education in the public schools. For four years he was clerk in the office of the P. R. R. at that place, and for several years worked in the car shops at Milton. He was next engaged as foreman in building the first telephone line through Central Pennsylvania. Since then, for twenty-two years past, he has resided in Philipsburg and numbered as one of their respected and most energetic citizens. For twelve years he has been Republican chairman in the Third ward of Philipsburg.

Mr. Lamb is a fine penman and a very correct accountant, having been employed much of his time in clerical work for a number of the business men of the town. Mr. Lamb is industrious and strictly honest, and is at the present time engaged at the Passmore house, the leading hotel of that town. Mr. Lamb is a staunch Republican, has for a number of years been a party worker, is a poor man of family and is deserving, and if elected, no doubt, will fill the office of Prothonotary with credit to himself, the party and his friends.

JOHN L. KNISELY.

John L. Knisely, of Bellefonte, our nominee for the Legislature, is a man worthy the support of every voter in the county. He is a son of M. G. Hunter Knisely, and was born near Roland thirty-five years ago. He comes of good and honest stock. His boyhood days was spent between hard work in the summer time and attendance at the country school in winter where he laid the foundation for a good business education which later in life was more thoroughly acquired by a hard course of self study and reading.

When a young man he went into the Bellefonte glass factory as an apprentice and learned the trade thoroughly from bottom to top. He worked at this trade until in 1896 he conceived the idea of forming a Co-operative company to put in operation the Bellefonte glass factory which had been idle for a number of years. In this was shown the remarkable business instinct of the man. He succeeded in organizing the company, and for several years ran the plant very successfully. In 1900 the Company was reorganized under the name of the Bellefonte Window Glass Company, limited; and Mr. Knisely, as treasurer and general manager, directed its affairs successfully until the plant was burned in the summer of 1902. In the spring of 1903 he embarked in other business in Bellefonte, in which he is also meeting with success.

His political official life consists of one term, three years, in the Bellefonte borough council, and it is no disparagement to any others to say that he made a most exemplary borough law-maker. This is the first time he has ever come before the people of Centre county asking anything, and so well do we know the strict integrity and business instinct and ability of the man that we can heartily assure every voter in Centre county that Mr. Knisely is a man that it would be a credit to elect to the Legislature.

Vote for Knisely and Womelsdorff who represent Republican principles, and if elected will go to Harrisburg as champions of those measures which will meet Republican approval. They will vote for a Republican speaker and for a Republican United States Senator to succeed Senator Knox, doubtless for the Senator himself. That is one reason Republicans should not scratch their ticket but support cordially and effectively the Republican nominees for the Legislature.

D. W. PLETCHER.

D. W. Pletcher, our candidate for county Surveyor, is a gentleman in every way well qualified to fill the position to which he has been nominated and aspires. He resides at Howard and is one of the best representative men of his neighborhood. You can make no mistake by voting for Mr. Pletcher for County Surveyor.

P. E. WOMELSDORF.

P. E. Womelsdorff, the subject of this sketch and one of the Republican nominees for Assembly from this county, and a resident of Philipsburg, was born and raised at Pottsville, Schuylkill county, Pa., educated in the common schools at that place, and was trained for the profession he has been following for the past twenty-five years in the offices of the Girard Estate, at the place of his birth. He came into Centre county about the year 1882 and has been following the profession of Mining Engineer actively ever since.

He entered political life in 1894, when he was elected a member of the State Legislature.

In 1896 he was defeated for the same office by an unfortunate division in his party, and in 1898 he was chosen as Centre county's choice for State Senator for the thirty-fourth Senatorial district.

In 1900 he was elected to the State convention and has been identified with the politics of Centre county in the Republican party more or less ever since.

Mr. Womelsdorff is a gentleman of pleasing appearance, genial manners and special fitness to the position he aspires. His past record in the Legislature was able and a credit to his constituents. He will make his personality felt at Harrisburg and will be an honor to the county, as well as a decided accession to the Republican strength of the House. Mr. Womelsdorff is very popular at his home as well as throughout the county, and we look for him to receive as large, if not the largest, vote ever polled in the county for a Republican candidate to the Legislature.

P. E. WOMELSDORFF.

taught in the public schools and Chester Springs Soldier's Orphan School during the winter until the fall of 1871, when he entered the Albany Law school, graduating in May, 1872, with Alton Brooks Parker, the now Democratic candidate for President. The same year he was admitted to the Supreme Court of New York and of Pennsylvania. His health failing during his law course, he spent the next ten years of his life in travel, herding cattle on the plains of Kansas, teaching and clerking in the law office of the late Judge Hoy, of Bellefonte.

On April 1st, 1882, he entered into partnership with the Hon. Seth H. Yocum, then a member of Congress from this district. Mr. Yocum retired from the practice of the law in the spring of 1883 and moved to Tennessee to engage in tanning. Since which time he has been in the active practice of his profession. He was not a candidate for the nomination of the office he now seeks, but was the unanimous choice of the Republican convention which nominated him. He is, therefore, a pure illustration of the "office seeking the man and not the man the office."

Mr. Harshberger is an able lawyer, a worthy gentleman of good standing. Public interests will be safe in his hands. Vote for him.

H. H. HARSHBERGER.

H. H. Harshberger, our nominee for District Attorney, is a self-made man. He was born on his father's farm at Zion, Walker township, Centre county, Pa., on the 10th day of June, 1850, where he grew into manhood. Attended the public schools of the neighborhood until he arrived at the age of sixteen when he attended the Penn Hall Academy and the Rebersburg County Normal school and began teaching the same year at Nittany Hall, after which he attended Penn Hall Academy, Susquehanna University at Selinsgrove and Dickinson Seminary at Williamsport during the spring and fall terms, and

People are becaming more sensible and give their time and attention to their work or business, and give the politicians the "go by." We must not think however that they don't keep posted on the issues of the day, for the advent of the R. F. Turn out Republicans of 1856 and '60.

Roland Pa. Oct. 25th, 1904

Mr. Editor:

I have seen the notice in the "Gazette" of last week for "Lincoln" voters to turn out on the night of the big Republican meeting next week that is a good idea and I hope a goodly number will be on hand, but in addition to that, why not let us have the old voters who began with the birth of the party in 1856, there are still some about, Col. Coburn, Henry P. Harris, John P. Harris, W. W. Montgomery, James Harris, Dr. Fairlamb, Frank P. Green and the other F. P. Green, Mr. Philip Crider was one but he can not attend all of Bellefonte and the writer and Geo. Taylor of Boggs, I think also W. B. Miles of Milesburg and also Capt. J. Miles Green of that town, G. Dorsey Green of Patton twp. and Dr. Christ of the College, and perhaps many more who will be there.

It will be a good idea to have them at the head of the parade, it will be like the "Silver Greys" of the Garfield campaign. Why not try it? Mr. Phil. Foster our efficient Chairman I think should put a notice in the paper to that effect and see how many will be able to turn out, it will probably be the last for any thing of the kind with them.

AUSTIN CURTIN.

—The annual roll-call service of the members of the Milesburg Baptist church is to be held Sunday morning at 10:45 o'clock. All members are urged to be present, and a cordial invitation is given the public.

THE GREEN—DILLON CASE.

ly and a dangerous instrument was used upon a vital part of the body with a manifest purpose so to use it, and that it was likely to produce death, then the law presumes they intended the natural consequences of their own act. The defendants admitted that they were guilty of murder in the second degree. The only question was really whether or not there was an intent to take life. We submitted the question fairly and fully under the evidence. We think the prisoners had a fair and unpartial trial. The jury was composed of twelve intelligent citizens of good standing and of good repute. And while there was some excitement existing because of the commission of the crime, yet it was not more so, than usual, when a homicide is committed in a county town or district.

We think the jury arrived at their verdict after due deliberation, free from bias or predjudice. We think that under the law the verdict is sustained by the evidence. If we did not think so we would feel it our duty to grant a new trial. But after a careful consideration of the case we discover no extenuating circumstances in the commission of the crime, and no good reason that would warrant our setting aside the verdict.

The rule is therefore discharged and new trial refused.

BY THE COURT.

ARBOR DAY OBSERVED.

By the Grammar and Primary Schools at Milesburg.

Autumn Arbor day for 1904 was quite enthusiastically observed yesterday by the Public schools at Central City, Boggs township and an unusually large number of citizens from the neighborhood and Milesburg were in attendance.

Both the grammar and the primary grade pupils of those schools took part in the exercises, in addition to which were able addresses appropriate to the occasion by Judge John G. Love, David F. Fortney, Esq., Revs. Pifer and Carver of Milesburg borough and Col. Austin Curtin, the efficient secretary of the Boggs township school board. Appropriate Arbor day and patriotic selections of music were rendered by the pupils of the schools and the friends of the schools in attendance at the time.

Half a dozen thrifty maple and elm trees, directly from the nursery were planted in front of the school grounds, one of which was dedicated to each of the six directors of the township, viz: William Fisher, president of the board, Col. Austin Curtin, secretary, Charles Peters, John Wagner, Thomas Malone and David Wensel. The trees planted are good sized and of the very best growers to be secured anywhere.

The observation of Arbor day should be more generally observed by the public schools everywhere than it seems to be. The prime object is to instill into the minds of the rising generation that it is far more creditable and beneficial to plant trees than to destroy or even neglect those that are growing. The question of forest preservation and the planting of trees is becoming more and more important each succeeding year.

ALMOST ASPHYXIATED.

Ambrose Ray Has A Narrow Escape from Death.

Ambrose Ray, a brother of S. D. Ray, Esq., was so nearly asphyxiated with coal gas last Friday night that it required the most strenuous measures on the part of the attending physicians to revive him, which was done only after several hours of hard work. Mr. Ray has a furniture repair shop on East Howard street in the rear of which is a room which he has comfortably furnished as a sitting and bed room combined, taking his meals at his brother's house. Ambrose is usually an early riser and around in time for breakfast. Last Saturday morning, however, when the family of S D. Ray were ready for the morning meal Ambrose had not appeared. Merely thinking that he had overslept himself they ate their breakfast and Mr. Ray went to his office. Eight o'clock came and Ambrose had not appeared, Beginning to feel alarmed Mrs. Ray sent one of her daughters up to see what was wrong. The girl found the doors of Ambrose's shop locked, all the windows fastened and the curtains down and though she called loudly and knocked on the doors and windows there was no answer from within.

When the girl returned and told her mother the conditions, as she found them, Mr. S. D. Ray was hastily summoned and he, making his way to the shop as quickly as possible, broke open the door and was almost overcome by the rush of gas from within. As soon as he could do so Mr. Ray made his way to the rear room and carried his brother into the fresh air, sending a hurry call for the doctor, and it was almost noontime before Ambrose was fully revived. It appears that he had gone to bed as usual after fixing the fire so it would keep till morning. Sometime during the night the stove pipe came apart, thus allowing the smoke and gas to escape into the room, soon filling the compartment and overpowering the unconscious sleeper. Had Ambrose not been discovered when he was it would in all probability have been too late to have saved his life.—Watchman.

Bill Neye's Cow Ad.

Bill Nye, the humorist, once had a cow to sell, and advertised her as follows: "Owing to my ill health, I will sell at my residence, in township 19, range 18, according to the Government's survey, one plush raspberry cow, aged 8 years She is of undoubted courage and gives milk frequently. To a man who knows no fear she would be a great boon.

"She is very much attached to her present home with a stay chain, but she will be sold to anyone who will agree to treat her right She is one-fourth shorthorn and three-fourth hyena. I will also throw in a double-barrell shotgun, which goes with her. In May she usually goes away for a week or two and returns with a tall red calf with wabbly legs. Her name is Rose. I would rather sell her to a non-resident."

Love Did Not Laugh at this Joke.

The Washington, D. C., Post of Saturday, tells the following story of the plight a newly wedded couple were in a few days ago in a hotel in that city. Inasmuch as the bride was formerly Miss Bessie Stroop, of Milesburg, well-known in this vicinity we republish the story so that her friends may enjoy the joke that was evidently so embarrassing to the present Mr. and Mrs. McClure.

"Mr. Frank McClure, connected with the Patton Water Co., of Patton, Pa., is at the Hotel Johnson with his bride on a honey moon trip to the Capitol, and in the lobby of the hostelry is their trunk, bound about with forged iron bands, impossible of being opened except with a cold chisel. The big trunk is not only steel clad but is the most gorgeously decorated affair ever used to hold a wedding trousseau.

The saratoga is bedecked with bunches of American flags, and to it are attached half a dozen old shoes of various brands, to bring the happy couple good luck. But what luck is there in having a trunk hermetically sealed asks the groom? On the ends and sides of the trunk are inscriptions warranted to bring blushes to the cheeks of the bride every time she remembers that it reposes brazenly in the lobby, where all who pass may read.

"Look at us," says one of the inscriptions. Another sign reads: "Ain't we sweet" On the ends, in chalk, passers-by may see "Just married" and "Dovie's end." On the top is a printed card, arranged through the forethought of the friends of the happy pair. It contains the following: "Can't you see that Frank and Bessie are on this train, off on their honeymoon. Everything is new to them; they don't know how to act. Watch them grin. Isn't that cute. Give them the glad hand."

The bride was Miss Elizabeth J. Stroop, of Milesburg, Pa. The friends of the bride and groom sent them off to the Capitol in style after the wedding, and they arrived at the Johnson on Thursday evening

Everybody who doesn't feel in prime condition physically or mentally really ought to make its acquaintance.

Vin-te-na is without doubt, the most speedy remedy for impoverished blood and weakened nerves that can be found anywhere. The reasons for its merit are, first, it contains the precise ingredients needed by the blood and nerves of people who are in anyway run down or weakened by any cause whatever, and secondly there is conscience back of ever bottle of it. The first aim of its manufacturers was to produce a nerve and blood tonic that should positively cure. Thought of its curing quality went before thought of its selling quality. When you buy Vin-te-na you buy an honest medicine of positive merit. It will ward off colds and grippe and keep you in tip top condition during the most trying months of the winter.

SHOTS THAT COUNT

Pennsylvania Republican Editors On the Firing Line.

STURDY SUPPORT FOR TICKET

Editorial Comemnt That Indicates Popular Sentiment In the Keystone State.

An enthusiastic interest in the campaign for the election of Roosevelt and Fairbanks and Republican nominees generally continues to be taken by the Republican press of Pennsylvania. Here are some recent utterances from editorial pages in the state touching upon the political situation:

A Change Not Wanted.

Vote for a change! Just pause a moment and consider what that means. It means leaving a certainty for an uncertainty, and once launched upon the sea of uncertainty, who can tell where he will fetch up? If a Republican house is elected, as well as a Republican president, there will be no convulsions in legislation and consequently no convulsions in business. The tariff will be safe, American labor will be protected, capital will not be withdrawn, the railroads will not discharge their help, the farmers will continue to have a market for their products. There will be no change in the financial system, banks will continue to have confidence and continue to make loans. That is what it means to "stand pat."—Butler Eagle.

Democrats As Obstructionists.

It cannot be successfully denied that the Democratic party is essentially one of obstruction, hostility and recusancy, with a decidedly marked propensity for opposition to anything and everything. It sometimes combines with the Prohibition party, whose principles are as diametrically opposed to its own as are those of heat to cold or right to wrong, but over and above all else it is a "fer ninst" party. Its caucuses, primaries and conventions are rarely if ever held until after the Republicans have taken the initiative and blazed the way. Had there been any Democrats, in the days of General Washington, they would doubtless have objected to his method of crossing the Delaware, and argued in favor of building a bridge.—Oil City Blizzard.

Now Get a Move On.

But a few days more remain, until election time. This fact ought to stir those who have anything to do to insure the success of the Republican ticket to get their coats off and go to work. Success in any line is not attained by go easy methods. It requires work—hard, vigorous work! Committeemen in their respective districts should begin to stir up tardy or disaffected voters and impress them with the idea that every American citizen has a duty to perform at the polls. Work, and nothing less than work, will accomplish this.—Tunkhannock Republican and News Age.

These Figures Speak Eloquently.

We know that our Democratic friends dislike comparisons and we fear the following will hurt: The number of business failures for nine months of this year was 7718. In 1893, when the Democrats came into power, the failures in the corresponding time numbered 11,140, and in 1896, the last year of Cleveland's administration, they numbered in nine months 11,280, and that was before the defeat of his party. Then the failures fell off greatly.—Lewisburg Saturday News.

Democratic Hypocrisy.

The hypocrisy of the Democratic leaders is displayed to perfection in their solicitude for the welfare of the Filipinos, while they utterly ignore the deprivation of rights whereby eight or nine millions of American citizens in southern states are debarred from the exercise of privileges guaranteed by the constitution of the country. This is an example of inconsistency that American voters generally will not overlook.—Norristown Herald.

Easy to Vote Straight.

A Republican who desires to vote a straight ticket will find a square on the left side of the ballot in which the word "Republican" is printed in black letters. All that is necessary is to make a cross mark in the space at the right of this party name and it will count as a vote for every Republican candidate on the ballot. It is the easiest thing in the world to vote a straight ticket on the new form of ballot.—Wellsboro Agitator.

Baptist Ministerial Association.

The twentieth annual session of the Baptist Ministerial association was held in the First Baptist church of McKeesport last week. The growth of the Baptist church in Pennsylvania has been great. In 1800 there were only about 2,000 Baptists in the State. In 1850 the number had increased to 30,000, and now the denomination has a strength of 118,000 in the Keystone state Fourteen years ago the Baptists had in this state five educational institutions, with $1,100,000 endowment, and seventy students. Now the endowment reaches $2,000,000, and there are 452 students.

BONE FOOD

Soft and crooked bones mean bad feeding. Call the disease rickets if you want to. The growing child must eat the right food for growth. Bones must have bone food, blood must have blood food and so on through the list.

Scott's Emulsion is the right treatment for soft bones in children. Little doses every day give the stiffness and shape that healthy bones should have.

Bow legs become straighter, loose joints grow stronger and firmness comes to the soft heads.

Wrong food caused the trouble. Right food will cure it.

In thousands of cases Scott's Emulsion has proven to be the right food for soft bones in childhood.

A GLANCE INTO THE FUTURE.

One night as I slept on
My sweet downy bed
I dreamed of a scheme
That swelled up my head.

I thought in my dream
I had just took a seat
In a grand trolley car
Up on East Curtin street.

With a twist of a crank
With a jerk and a jar
It sped on its journey
Oh that grand trolley car.

It dashed down the hills
Without any regard
For the curve in the wall
On Hen's new boulevard.

It's now at the mountain
This electrified steed
Is now climbing its side
With wonderful speed.

The scenes in Penns Valley
Filled my soul with delight
While the grass covered lawns
Are clear out of sight.

Just now there's confusion
We're all trying to stand
To see the old stable
Where Fill-Up shot a man.

Good bye to old Centre,
Just now crossed the bridge
And are rolling along
On a mignty high ridge.

Down grade she went speeding
And straight through Milroy
To the Natives that trolley
Just looked like a toy.

Darting through valleys
Passing farm house and field
Until old Logan Springs
Did Reedsville reveal.

That devil dashed onward
Without steam chest or stack
With her five million volts
Busted Honey Creek track.

Now just take a trolley
And we'll bet you a stake
You can come to Bellefonte
For less than half-rate.

Specialists were employed and many remedies used but relief and permanent good was found only in the use of De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. When Does Indian Summer Begin.

There seems to be some question as to the beginning of Indian summer, a popular part of autumn weather. In England it is placed on St Martin's Day, or Martinmas, which comes on November 11th That would make it a little late in this latitude, and yet Indian summer is supposed to come after the first spell of squally weather, which is called squaw winter As we seldom have snow before November it would seem that if Martin's Day is not far from the opening of Indian summer. Anyhow, it is well to have a fixed date for a season so important, and St. Martin's Day is as good as any.

Workingmen of Pennsylvania Repudiate Professional Democratic Campaigners.

THEY STOOD BY THE PRESIDENT

A Scheme of the Parker Machine Which Has Not Worked Well Here.

[Special Correspondence.]

Scranton, Oct. 25.

Discovery has been made of the fact that the Democratic national committee has seen fit to employ a number of professional agitators and to publish what would appear to be special editions of papers apparently printed in the interest of labor to bolster up the Democratic campaign.

A desperate attempt is being made to swing the votes of the workingmen of the country to Parker and free trade and to the Democratic candidates for congress who are committed to a repeal of the tariff and to other policies calculated to destroy the business interests of the country.

While the Democratic managers do not hope to carry Pennsylvania for Parker, they have devoted their campaign in this state to a scheme to get workingmen to vote for the Democratic nominees for congress.

They have flooded some of the congressional districts with these newspapers manufactured specially for the campaign, but they have failed signally in this undertaking.

The workingmen of Pennsylvania have become acquainted with the influences back of this campaign, and they have taken steps to inform all who might be fooled by these tactics as to the true condition of affairs.

At a meeting of representative men of the anthracite coal regions held in Scranton a few days ago, action was taken which will completely upset the plans of the Democrats. A committee, of which E. C. Patterson is chairman and Thomas Henry secretary, was appointed to present the facts to the voters of the country, and as the result of their deliberations resolutions were unanimously adopted which have the ring of sincerity and stamp of truth.

These resolutions, among other things, set forth:

Whereas, We have seen by the press reports that an organization known as the Western Federation of Miners has at the connivance and solicitation of the Democratic national committee sent some of its members through the Middle, Western and Eastern States to advocate the election of the Democratic nominees for president and vice president of the United States, hoping to induce other workmen to support said nominees by their votes at the coming November election; and

Whereas, It is inconsistent with the principles and teaching of any just labor organization to advocate or give preference to any politician or any political party, but to be true to those who by their actions respect, uphold and support the rights of labor; and

Whereas, We know from past experience, and the people of our country know by the press reports of the past, that Hon. Theodore Roosevelt was imbued with the American spirit of fair play when he appointed the commission to inquire into the grievances of which the anthracite miners and workmen complained, and by such actions gave us a chance to show to the people of our country that we had just cause for complaint, and to ask redress for those wrongs, as may be seen by the report of said commission; therefore, be it

Resolved, That inasmuch as those national Democratic committeemen have seen fit to hire those so-called Western Federation men to act the part of calamity howlers, hoping thereby to impose upon the liberal minds and tender sympathies of workingmen to the detriment of those entitled to well-merited support, we earnestly ask all lovers of fair play to consider well, before voting, the merits of the principals in this campaign, and having done so, to vote conscientiously for the men who best deserve their suffrages, and consistently maintain the rights of American freemen, and not be led, pulled or gulled by any base hirelings or sychophants who dare approach them to solicit their votes because of their membership in a labor union; and be it further

Resolved, That appreciating the manliness, of the man who had the courage of his convictions to at his country's call leave all that he held near and dear in this world and hasten to the front, ready and willing to yield up his life on the altar of his country, would the sacrifice be necessary for the liberty of the down-trodden and oppressed, and who has always shown his sympathetic feeling for the lowly and the toiling masses of the people, and on many occasions has publicly displayed his good will for the plain people, and by his love of fair play and justice to men according to merits, that we, appreciating what he has done to promote his and our country's welfare, and knowing his ...ny sacrifices in behalf of our country's interests and our own, ask all lovers of liberty and fair play to support Hon. Theodore Roosevelt's candidacy for the office of president of these United States, and show to the world that the workingmen of this country, regardless of partisan strife, are not unmindful of what he has done for them; and that we at this time and in this way express our appreciation of his worth, and by these presents send greeting to the workingmen of our country, and ask all men who believe in honoring merit, justice and fair play to march resolutely to the polls on the eighth day of next November and cast their votes for the election of Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, the friend of the people.

The resolutions further declare that 150,000 men of this region "reiterate their faith in the president's judgment and ability, and pledge to him, as an active friend of the workingmen, our sincere support; and we earnestly ask the workingmen of all crafts throughout our country to join with us in aiding his election by a stupendous vote, as a just tribute to his merits, that we may all have in the White House a man whose worth we appreciate, and whose friendship we esteem, and we jointly and severally pledge to do all in our power to the end that we may for four years more hail him as our worthy and honored chief executive."

Not only are the members of this body of representative workingmen laboring for the election of Roosevelt, but they are supporting Republican candidates for congress upon the principle that Roosevelt's action in the coal strike indicated the policy of the Republican party in favor of giving labor a fair show and honest treatment under all circumstances.

"Go West,

Ranch it and rough it and you'll soon get rid of that weak chest and that hacking cough." That is what the doctor said to a young married man with a wife and child to care for and a modest salary to support them on. He couldn't go West. Love and duty tied him to his desk in the city.

People don't have to travel to cure coughs or strengthen weak lungs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures obstinate, deep-seated coughs, bronchitis, bleeding of the lungs, weakness, emaciation and other forms of disease which if neglected or unskillfully treated terminate fatally in consumption.

"I will write you what Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has done for me," says George H. Belcher, Esq., of Dorton, Pike County, Ky. "Thirteen years ago I was wounded by a ball passing through my lung. I have had a bad cough almost ever since, with shortness of breath, and it was very easy to take cold; the slightest change of weather would cause the cough to be so bad I would have to sit up in bed all night. Could not eat or sleep at times; was all run down; could not work at all. A few months ago I began using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Have not used more than two bottles, and now can eat, sleep, and work, and I feel like a new man. I cannot find words to sufficiently recommend Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, or tell the good it has done me."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser in paper covers is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. The book has 1008 pages and over 700 illustrations. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Roosevelt Licked

It is now evident that Roosevelt is going to be badly licked this campaign. We have received from The Coupon Press, Washington Heights, Chicago, a book of 95 stickers like a postage stamp only larger, each being a half tone portrait of the president with the title "Four more years for Teddy." They look very neat on a letter head or envelope and as the idea is rather novel they will, no doubt, be licked by thousands of Roosevelt's admirers. The publishers will send a sample book to parties sending ten cents and mention this paper. This is a special offer to our readers.

He should have shuffled off at the beginning.

A great many business men today are committing business suicide at the wrong end of their lives!

They mean well at the start, but drift away from their good resolutions.

One means of a long and prosperous business life is to have good printing and stationery.

A business is judged by its printed matter.

A DESERVED PROMOTION.

William Waddle Elected Treasurer of the Nittany Iron Company.

We do not know of a more deserving young man in Bellefonte than William Waddle and his many friends throughout Bellefonte and Centre County will be very glad to hear of a promotion which has recently been bestowed upon him. Mr. Waddle has been employed by the Nittany Iron Company since their re-organization in July of this year as a book-keeper and paymaster. His work has evidently met with the approval of his employers for it is learned that on the 6th of October at a meeting of the board of directors he was elected secretary and treasurer of the Nittany Iron Company. This is a very responsible position but there is no doubt that Mr. Waddle will measure up to the full requirements of the place.

Mr. Waddle was employed by the Bellefonte Furnace Company from 1898 up to July 1904 first as a book-keeper and later as pay-master, prior to accepting a position with the Nittany Iron Company.

Bold Robbery at Coleville

Sometime during Monday night a bold robber entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Eckley at Coleville and stole $90.00. Whoever the person was he certainly had plenty of nerve. He gained an entrance to this home, crept into the bedroom and took the money from under Mrs. Eckley's pillow while the lady was sleeping. She was not awakened until the thief was leaving the room when she heard a noise and immediately alarmed her husband, who gave the fellow a chase but could not get a hold of him.

The reason Mr. Eckley had so large an amount of money in his home at the time was that he intended making a payment on his property on Tuesday morning, and the money was drawn from the bank for this purpose. We sincerely sympathize with them and hope the villian will soon be caught.

Death of Capt. David Mitchell.

Capt. David Mitchell, of New Berlin, who is well known to many Centre County people and is related to the Bilger family at Pleasant Gap, died on Monday October 10th. The following account of his death is from the New Berlin Reporter.

On Monday, Oct. 10th at 9 P. M. the angel of death entered the home of A. P. Mitchell and removed our esteemed friend captain David Mitchell. Death was due to gangerene resulting from a chronic sore foot.

Mr. Mitchell was born Sept. 23, 1828, in Jackson Township, Snyder Co. Later on the family removed to Ashland where he lived until the breaking out of the late Rebellion.

He enlisted in the services of the Union and served four years. He was Captain of Company D. 208th. Regiment. Pa. Volunteers, Infantry. 1st Brigade, 3d Division, 9th Army Corps. During his enlistment he took part in a number of battles and rendered heroic service. At Antitem Run he was wounded which was indirectly the cause of his death.

After the close of war he moved to New Berlin which place he made his permanent home.

He early showed his religious nature by uniting himself with the Lutheran Church to which he affiliated himself in 1845. He was ever afterwards a faithful and consistent member, always at his place, never shirking a duty.

He entered upon two matrimonial ventures. His first wife was a Miss Courtney. This Union was blessed with two daughters, one of whom preceded her father while he was in the Army, the other, Mrs. Wetzel of Phila. survives. His second marriage was to Miss Emma Walter in 1866. One son blessed this union A. P. Mitchell who resides in New Berlin.

Mr. Mitchell served as Justice of the Peace of the Boro of New Berlin for twenty years. Also clerk of the Council for fifteen years.

He was a member of the G. A. R. Post of Lewisburg.

The funeral was held on Friday Oct. 14 at 9,30 at the house and 10 o'clock at the church. Old comrades had charge of the obsequies as per his desire Rev. W. H. Schoch officiated assisted by Rev. Noll of the Reformed Church.

He reached the ripe old age of 76 years and 17 days.

The pall bearers were old Comrades.

A CASH TESTIMONY.

People of Martha Present Rev. Lathrop with a Purse of $25.

That the people of Martha Furnace and vicinity think a good deal of Rev. A. C. Lathrop, pastor of the Baptist church of that place and Milesburg, was plainly shown Sunday evening last. During that day the Baptist church was re-dedicated after having been remodeled and generally beautified at an expense of about a thousand dollars. All this was made by the members of the church at that place and the good people of the community. Rev. Lathrop lives at Milesburg but during the rebuilding of the Martha Church was on the ground and personally assisted to the fullest extent of his physical ability without expecting a single penny for his personal labor. The citizens of Martha and vicinity, not members of this particular church would not have it so, and Sunday evening, after the dedicatory services were all over, these people took charge of the program and presented Rev. Lathrop with a puree containing $25 in cash as an evidence of their appreciation of him and his work as a minister of the Gospel and their regard for him as a gentleman.

"Kansas Chief" a Winner.

"Kansas Chief" owned by M. B. Garman, of this place, won the 2:35 class at Clearfield Thursday in three straight heats. Five horses were in the race.

This horse has made quite a reputation for itself, and justified the opinion of it, held all along by Mr. Garman and his trainers. "Kansas Chief," has made a good showing in every race entered this year and won a nice little sum of money for his owner. We congratulate Mr. Garman on having so valuable a piece of horse flesh in his possession and hope it may continue to be a winner.

Sunday Afternoon Accident.

On Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock while the scholars were gathering for Sunday School at the Forge church near the Nittany Furnace. Russell Miller, a lad 17 years old, was fooling with an old revolver and Lewis Miller aged 17 and a half dozen other boys were watching him when the firearms exploded, the ball entering the left arm of Lewis Miller below the elbow. The accident happened in the vestibule of the church and caused a great deal of excitement among the scholars. The lad was taken to his home at Vernona where a doctor was summoned and with great difficulty extracted the bullet from the young man's arm. It was a most painful operation but the young man is getting along very nicely, and if no other complications set in he will be around in a few days.
